

NEW PLAY BY H. H. DAVIES.

"Cousin Kate," Produced at the Haymarket, London, a Success.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cablegram.

LONDON, June 19.—The Times says that H. H. Davies's "Cousin Kate," produced at the Haymarket Theatre last evening, is a good play, a thousand times better than Mr. Davies's "Mrs. Goringe's Necklace," because it is all joyous comedy. The plot is of the simplest, exhibiting the joy of youth and love without gush and without sickly sentiment.

Cousin Kate is a woman of the world who, after getting her family and relatives out of more or less childish troubles, has a love adventure with a fascinating stranger. It would be hopeless to describe the various incidents of a flirtation culminating in an ardent passion and Kate's acceptance of her lover.

This joyous comedy is joyously played by all concerned. Miss Ellis Jeffreys as Cousin Kate is all exhilaration. Miss Beatrice Farrar and Miss Carlotta Addison are very droll. Cyril Maude will be even more joyous when he is less nervously restless.

The New York Times

Published: June 19, 1903

Copyright © The New York Times